A wave of business innovation is driving the productivity resurgence in the U.S. economy. In Wired for Innovation, Erik Brynjolfsson and Adam Saunders describe how information technology directly or indirectly created this productivity explosion, reversing decades of slow growth. They argue that the companies with the highest level of returns to their technology investment are doing more than just buying technology; they are inventing new forms of organizational capital to become digital organizations. These innovations include a cluster of organizational and business-process changes, including broader sharing of information, decentralized decision-making, linking pay and promotions to performance, pruning of non-core products and processes, and greater investments in training and education. Innovation continues through booms and busts. This book provides an essential guide for policy makers and economists who need to understand how information technology is transforming the economy and how it will create value in the coming decade.

Simulating Innovation: Computer-Based Tools for Rethinking Innovation

Christopher Watts and Nigel Gilbert explore the generation, diffusion and impact of innovations that can now be studied using computer simulation models. Agent-based models, in particular, offer explanations for the phenomena of innovation that emerge from interactions among complex, adaptive and diverse networks of firms, people, technologies, practices and resources. This book provides a critical review of these recent advances. Elements explored include the diffusion of innovations, social ne...

The Self Wired

While white racism has global dimensions, it has an unshakeable lease on life in South African political organizations and its educational system. Donnarae MacCann and Yulisa Maddy here provide a thorough and provocative analysis of South African children's literature during the key decade around Nelson Mandela's release from prison. Their research demonstrates that the literature of this period was derived from the same milieu -- intellectual, educational, religious, political, and economic -- ...

Wired/Wireless Internet Communications

The International Conference on Wired/Wireless Internet Communications (WWIC) was held for the second time, following a successful start in 2002, in Las Vegas. The goal of the conference was to present high-quality results in the field and to provide a framework for research collaboration through focused discussions that designated future research efforts and directions. The number and the quality of submissions indicate that we are well on the way to establishing WWIC as a major event in the field of wired/wireless in...

Clio Wired: The Future of the Past in the Digital Age

In these pathbreaking essays, Roy Rosenzweig charts the impact of new media on teaching, researching, preserving, presenting, and understanding history. Negotiating between the "cyberenthusiasts" who champion technological breakthroughs and the "digital skeptics" who fear the end of traditional humanistic scholarship, Rosenzweig re-envisions the practices and professional rites of academic historians while analyzing and advocating for the achievements of amateur historians. While he addresses the...
